

Association of Medical School Microbiology & Immunology Chairs

The Association of Medical School Microbiology and Immunology Chairs (AMSMIC) is an organization whose purpose is to promote, advance and support the educational and scientific purposes of the field of microbiology and immunology, and to provide a forum for communication among chairpersons of Departments of Microbiology and Immunology or equivalent organizational units responsible for teaching medical students.

Other goals of AMSMIC are to aid in the education and training of medical students and physicians; to explore means, methods, agencies and funds by which such microbiological and immunological and other scientific research and education may be furthered, and to assist dissemination of microbiological and immunological and other medical and scientific knowledge.
