

School of Medicine

Chair

Department of Medical Microbiology and Immunology

Creighton University School of Medicine invites applications and nominations for Chair of the Department of Medical Microbiology and Immunology. The school is seeking an individual with leadership ability and administrative experience who will work to promote excellence in all missions of the department, school, and university. The major responsibilities of the chair are to further develop and promote high quality research, provide leadership and vision to enhance existing programs and develop new initiatives, and to vigorously support medical and other educational programs of the department. Information about the department can be found at <https://medschool.creighton.edu/departments/medical-microbiology-immunology>

Applicants should have a Ph.D. and/or MD. The successful candidate must have a record of distinguished research accomplishments highlighted by publications in peer-reviewed journals, and a research program supported by ongoing extramural funding. A strong commitment to mentoring to promote professional growth and development of faculty in the department, and to establishing collaboration with faculty in other basic and clinical departments is essential.

The School of Medicine is one of nine schools or colleges at Creighton University including professional schools of Business, Law, Nursing, Dentistry, Pharmacy and Health Professions, and a Graduate School. Founded in 1878, Creighton University is a Catholic, Jesuit institution with an enrollment of approximately 8821 students.

We encourage applications from qualified individuals representing all backgrounds and faith traditions who identify with our mission and can contribute to our distinctive academic traditions. Candidates are strongly urged to familiarize themselves with Creighton's mission and founding principles and review the Faculty Handbook at:
